A Study of Massive Open Online Courses (Moocs) for Librarian Professional Development

The purpose of this research was to study the learning data through Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCs) of Generation Y or Gen Y people in Bangkok, the problems and obstacles in learning through Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCs) of Generation Y people in Bangkok. Part and parcel to the development of MOOCs has been the careful consideration instructors and MOOC providers have paid to the construction of virtual learning environments and course delivery systems.

Transformative Learning is a learning process based on the understanding of belief and mindset frameworks that limit perceptions. Such understanding helps broaden viewpoints and perspectives so that an individual becomes more open-minded and flexible, as well as able to live more harmoniously with conflicts and differences. The study results showed a tendency of self-transformation in line with the stages of transformative learning theory among some participants, whereas most participants reflected the development of new perspectives that have brought about self-realization and self-understanding.
